Phony $1,000 Target Gift Card is the Scam of the Year

By Matt BrownellPosted 5:01PM 01/18/13 Posted under: Consumer Protection, Ripoffs & Scams
Share

A fake contest for a $1,000 Target (TGT) gift card has been declared 2012's "Scam of the Year" by online complaint resolution platform Scambook.

The fraud, which Scambook spotted back in November, actually spread via text rather than through social media or email channels. Victims of this "smishing" (SMS phishing) scheme received a text reading "Your entry last month WON! Go to TargetContests.com enter winning code 3847 to claim your FREE $1000.00 Target gift card within 24hrs." Gullible users who clicked through to the (now-defunct) website and entered the code were prompted to enter a wide range of personal information, but never got their hands on the promised gift card.

The Target scam followed similar scams promising gift cards from the likes of Walmart (WMT) and Best Buy (BBY). And according to Scambook's Kase Chong, those two scams (in January and April, respectively) were smaller test runs for the main event, which dropped like a nuclear bomb in mid-November and prompted more than a hundred complaints to Scambook overnight.

"We believe that it was meant to center around the shopping holiday season," says Chong, who estimates that between 200,000 and 350,000 people across the country received the text on their cell phone. The scammers likely used a random-number generator that picked potentially active cell numbers with a reasonably high success

The Long Con; A Scam That Breeds Worse Scams

The good news is that those people who clicked through to the site weren't directly relieved of their money. Instead, they were asked a series of seemingly innocuous questions intended to steal as much personally identifying information as possible, from the victim's mailing address to the name of his or her dog.

"The private info goes into a database, and they sell marketing lists on the black market," Chong explains. "Best-case scenario, you end up getting a whole lot more targeted spam." And the worst case scenario? Your information is used in identity-theft schemes -- or to con you with further scams: By including personally identifying details about you, the next wave of phishing emails will appear more convincing. In other words, this is a scam that breeds more effective scams.

Simple common sense should help most consumers sniff out this sort of fraud: If you didn't enter a contest to win a gift card, that should be your first tip-off that something is amiss. But Chong adds that cell phones are an unregulated "wild west" that makes them particularly susceptible to this kind of fraud. For instance, texting STOP to the number texting you -- a sort of universal code for unsubscribing to text lists -- will actually backfire in this instance, as it confirms to the scammers that your number is valid, and prompts them to send you more spam texts.

If you happened to fall for this scam, but have yet to receive any blow back, don't think you're out of the woods. Chong says that victims of the scam won't know for months, so for the foreseeable future, you should treat emails (and further texts) with a high degree of suspicion. For instance, you might get an email claiming to be from your bank that presents your address and phone number as "proof" that it's from a trusted source.

But here's one thing you won't be getting: A $1,000 Target gift card.

Text Message Gift Card Scam is Back for the Holidays

BY EMILY PATTERSON - NOVEMBER 30, 2012

The gift card text message scam is back with a vengeance this holiday shopping season. Shoppers across the country are reporting receiving spam text messages, called smishing, saying they won a pricey gift card.

How the Scam Works:

You receive a text message. When you open it, you are surprised by a message informing you that you've won a Best Buy gift card (or Target, Wal-Mart or other major retailer). You just need to go to a website and enter a PIN, and the card is yours.

The text's URL leads to a website that has the company's colors and logo. It looks authentic with the company's name as the site's sub-domain (example: www.bestbuy.scamwebsite.com).

You are asked to enter the PIN and an email address. Then, you are taken to a form and instructed to fill out your name, cell number, mailing address and answer unrelated personal questions, such as "Are you interested in going back to school?" and "Are you diabetic?" When you reach the page to "claim your gift card," you instead find yourself directed to another site to apply for a credit card.

The texts are just a way to collect personal information for shady advertisers. Scammers often change the store names and cash amounts of the gift cards. A typical text message is below:

"Black Friday Winner #88323! You have WON the Best Buy Gift Card for $1000! Get your prize at WEBSITE now! Use the code 5417."

What Can I Do About Scam Text Messages:

- Ignore instructions to text "STOP" or "NO" to prevent future texts. This is a common ploy by scammers to confirm they have a real, active phone number.
- Forward the texts to 7726 (SPAM on most keypads). This will alert your cellphone carrier to block future texts from those numbers.
- If you think your text message is real, be sure it's directing to a web address like Bestbuy.com or Target.com, not www.bestbuy.otherwebsite.com
- And as always, if you think getting a free $1,000 gift card seems too good to be true, it probably is.

"Your entry last month has WON! Go to www.\*\*\*\*.com to claim your FREE $1000 Target gift card within 24 hrs."

That's a text I got last week. If you haven't received one of these annoying texts, you know someone who has. Ask around.

It may say Target or Best Buy. It could say Walmart. But those stores have nothing to do with it.

Rarely do I hear from SO many people who want to believe so badly that something is real.

I've aired stories on it. I've personally written back dozens of people. Yet every day, I get calls, posts and emails that go much like this:

Consumer: Did I win?
Joe: Did you enter?
Consumer: Enter what?
Joe: Then how could you win?

NO! IT'S NOT REAL. IT'S A SCAM!

You answer the text, it leads to another site, and scammers get information they can later abuse.

Don't get me wrong. I ask people to send me their scams. But, they keep coming. Which leads me to believe some people ARE replying and scammers ARE getting what they want.

It's clear, exposing the scam ... repeatedly ... isn't enough.
The real solution? Keeping these texts off your phone in the first place!

So, I asked my friends at Scambook.com what we all want to know: How do scammers get my number?

How to stop scam text messages from getting to your cell phone

They came up with three ways:

1. Scammers use special software that crawls websites like Facebook and Craigslist looking for phone numbers you post. Don't post phone numbers.

Advertisement

2. Scammers use random number generators to send out messages to both activated and deactivated numbers. If you reply, the software knows the number works, and you get more. Don't reply.

3. Scammers use computer viruses and hacking techniques to gather phone numbers from your own computer or private email account. Not much you can do about that one.

And I took it to the businesses we pay every month for the instrument that brings us these bogus texts.

So AT&T, Sprint and Verizon, how do we keep these annoying text messages off my phone?

Well, they offer help, sort of.

Verizon has something called "Block that Spam." It's free. You enter the annoying phone number and it's gone. You can also block texts from email or web addresses. But, it lasts 90 days and then you have to re-enter the number. And since the same scammers use different numbers each time, you'll be blocking a lot of numbers.

Read about Verizon Wireless free spam controls.

AT&T asks you to forward the spam message to short code 7726 (SPAM). They will then investigate, though it doesn't say that will automatically block the text message number.

Read about AT&T's text message spam controls.

Both companies agree ... don't respond to the texts or you will likely get many more.

My advice? One word: delete!

Are there scams you see? Is there something that needs to be investigated?

This week's scam stopper: Never deposit a check you receive from someone you don't know. It could end up closing your bank account.

Email me with any scams you see or "like" my ABC 15 Facebook page and let's talk about them there.
